

Contributors

Chris BAKER is Honorary Editor of JSS. In 2020, he published, with Pasuk Phongpaichit, Kings in Love, Lilit Phra Lo and Twelve Months: Two Classic Thai Poems (Silkworm Books). Contact: chrispasuk@gmail.com

Brigitte BORELL graduated from Heidelberg University with a doctorate in Classical Archaeology. She worked for the German Archaeological Institute (DAI) at the excavations in Olympia (Greece) and the Institute for Classical Archaeology of the University in Heidelberg as a researcher. Later she lived in Southeast Asia for several years due to family reasons. She now lives near Heidelberg and works as an independent scholar and as an associate lecturer at Heidelberg University. Her special topics are ancient glass studies and the Maritime Silk Road in the early centuries CE. Contact: b.borell@uni-heidelberg.de

John CLARK is Professor Emeritus in Art History at the University of Sydney where he taught for twenty-one years. His first major book was Modern Asian Art (University of Hawai‘i Press, 1998). His Asian Modernities: Chinese and Thai art of the 1980s and 1990s (Power Publications, 2010) won the Best Art Book Prize of the Art Association of Australia and New Zealand in 2011, while his Modernities of Chinese Art and Modernities of Japanese Art were published by Brill in 2010 and 2013 respectively. His two-volume The Asian Modern, 1850s – 1990s covering twenty-five Asian artists in five generations from the 1850s to the 1990s will be published by the National Gallery of Singapore in October 2020. Contact: john.clark@sydney.edu.au

Ruben FAIS earned his Master of Arts and his Master’s degree in Oriental Archaeology and Art at La Sapienza University of Rome, with full honours. After a postgraduate course in Museum Education Standards at Roma Tre University, he devoted his independent research to the study of the art of India and Southeast Asia, with emphasis on Buddhist iconography (The Birth of the Buddha in the Early Buddhist Art Schools, Anthem Press, 2013). Since 2004, he has been the head of the educational department and later the Curator (2007-2008) of the Stefano Cardu Museum of Siamese Art in Cagliari, and has published studies on the museum’s important art collection (The Rāmakien paintings from “Cardu” Museum of Siamese Art of Cagliari. Epic Subjects and Their Links to Divine Kingship. D.K. Printworld, 2016). He has also written children’s educational books for the Cardu Museum (Coloriamo l’oriente. Lulu.com, 2011, reprint 2013; Il tesoro del pavone, Lulu.com, 2014; and Cento e un tesoro. Il centenario del Museo Cardu 1918-2018, Lulu.com, 2018). Contact: rubenfais1@gmail.com

Charles HIGHAM read Archaeology at Cambridge University, and is an Emeritus Professor at the University of Otago. He began his fieldwork in Thailand in 1970, and has since excavated and published many prehistoric sites. He is a Fellow of the British Academy, the Royal Society of New Zealand, and an Honorary Fellow of St Catharine's College Cambridge. The British Academy has honoured him with the Grahame Clark medal for distinguished archaeological fieldwork. Contact: charles.higham@otago.ac.nz

Irving Chan JOHNSON is an associate professor in the Department of Southeast Asian Studies at the National University of Singapore. He received his PhD in 2004 in Anthropology from Harvard University. He is the author of The Buddha on Mecca's Verandah (University of Washington Press, 2012). He is also a traditional Thai mural painter and has been working on illustrating the walls of the wihan at Wat Uttamayanmuni in Singapore since 2012. Contact: seajic@mus.edu.sg

KONG Rithdee has been writing about culture and politics for the Bangkok Post since 1996. He is the English translator of The Blind Earthworm in the Laybyrinth, a S.E.A. Write Award winning novel by Veeraporn Nitiprapha. He is now a deputy director at Thai Film Archive. Contact: kongrithdee@gmail.com

KWANCHEWAN Buadaeng is associate professor at the Department of Sociology-Anthropology, Faculty of Social Sciences, Chiang Mai University. Her recent works include "A Karen Charismatic Monk and Connectivity across the Thai-Myanmar Borderland" in Charismatic Monk of Lanna Buddhism, edited by Paul T. Cohen (NIAS Press, 2017) and "The Karen Leke Religious Movement in the Thailand-Myanmar Borderland: Deterritorialization and Diversification" in Ethnic and Religious Identities and Integration in Southeast Asia, edited by Ooi Keat Gin and Volker Grabowsky (Silkworm Books, 2017). Contact: kwanchewan.buadaeng@gmail.com

Simon LANDY is an independent researcher currently completing a history of 19th century Anglo-Siamese relations based on a fresh analysis of primary materials, following a career as a lecturer, journalist and consultant in Southeast Asia. Contact: slandybkk@gmail.com

PIMPRAPHAI Bisalputra graduated from the London School of Economics and attended Cornell University for postgraduate studies. She has published extensively in Thai on the Thai-Chinese, including Samphao sayam [Siamese junk] and Nai mae. With Jeffery Sng, she has co-authored Bencharong and Chinawares in the Court of Siam: The Surat Osathanugrah Collection (2011) and A History of the Thai-Chinese (2015).

SAMUSTPON Tanapan is an assistant professor in architecture at the Faculty of Architecture and Planning, Thammasat University, Bangkok. Contact: samustpon@gmail.com

SANTIRAK Prasertsuk is an associate professor in architecture at the Faculty of Architecture and Planning, Thammasat University, Bangkok. Contact: santirak@ap.tu.ac.th

SRISAK Phattanawasin is an associate professor in architecture at the Faculty of Architecture and Planning, Thammasat University, Bangkok. Contact: srisak@ap.tu.ac.th

Craig REYNOLDS is Chair, Asian Studies Editorial Board, ANU Press. His most recent book is Power, Protection and Magic in Thailand: The Cosmos of a Southern Policeman (ANU Press, 2019). Contact: creynolds697@gmail.com

Jeffery SNG graduated in philosophy and English literature from the University of Singapore, and pursued postgraduate studies at the Department of Government and the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies in Cornell University. He has written on Chinese ceramics and the history of Overseas Chinese, and co-authored, with Pimpraphai Bisalputra, Bencharong and Chinawares in the Court of Siam: The Surat Osathanugrah Collection (2011) and A History of the Thai-Chinese (2015). He also has co-authored with Kishore Mahbubani The Asean Miracle (2017). Contact: stms@cscoms.com

THAK Chaloemtiarana is professor in the graduate fields of Asian literature, religion, culture, and Southeast Asian Studies at Cornell University. He retired from the Department of Asian Studies and as Director of the Cornell Southeast Asia Program in 2010, but continues to mentor graduate students and to serve on committees, such as the editorial board of the Southeast Asia Program/Cornell University Press. His book, Thailand: the politics of despotic paternalism (Bangkok: Social Sciences Association of Thailand, and Thammasat University Thai Khadi Institute, 1979), published when he was associate professor of political science at Thammasat University, has been translated into Thai and Japanese. The book has been republished several times, the latest Thai version (fifth edition) appearing in 2018. His latest publication is Read Till It Shatters: nationalism and identity in modern Thai literature (Australian National University Press, 2018). Contact: tc17@cornell.edu

James A. WARREN is a lecturer in the University Scholars Programme (USP) of the National University of Singapore (NUS). Before joining NUS, he taught in the Social Science Division of Mahidol University International College (MUIC), Thailand, for a number of years. He holds a PhD in History and a MA in South East Asian Studies from the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London. In addition to articles on Thai and Burmese history, he is the author of Gambling, the State and Society in Thailand, c.1800-1945 (2013). Contact: uspjaw@nus.edu.sg

Hunter WATSON is a PhD candidate at the National University of Singapore (NUS), Department of Southeast Asian Studies. He holds a MA in Oriental Epigraphy from Silpakorn University, where he studied Sanskrit, Khmer, Mon, and the development of ancient scripts in Southeast Asia. In addition to epigraphy and palaeography, he is interested in archaeology, art history, ceramics, and GIS. He is co-editor, with Anna Bennett, of Defining Dvāravatī: Essays from the U Thong International Workshop 2017 (Silkworm Books, 2020). Currently, he is a recipient of the NUS PhD scholarship, the NUS Dean's PhD fellowship, the École française d'Extrême-Orient (ESEO) field research scholarship, and the ENITS scholarship from Chulalongkorn University. He is a senior research fellow at the Center for Khmer Studies (CKS) in Siem Reap, and he is affiliated with the Faculty of Archaeology, Silpakorn University, in Bangkok. Contact: hunteriwatson@gmail.com

Herbary ZHANG is a PhD candidate in Asian and Policy Studies at Education University of Hong Kong. His research interests include Chinese Diaspora-Southeast Asia Connections; gender and migration in Southeast Asia and Hong Kong; and the anthropology of cross-border development. Contact: herbary.cmu@gmail.com